CHANLER GETS AFTER HUGHES

PUTS TEN QUESTIONS FOR THE GOVERNOR TO ANSWER.

He Says That the Governor "Knows of His tiwn knowledge That I Am in Payer of the Enforcement of All Laws, Including the Laws Against Cambling."

NEWBURGH, Oct. 19 .- Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler went back at Gov. Hughes here to-night, answering the Governor's questions as to his attitude on the enforcement of the laws against gambling, charging the Governor with lack of good faith in attempting to make as the principal issue of the campaign a question which both sums paid to the higher officials of these party platforms have ignored and slamming ten questions at the Governor for immediate answer.

"He knows of his own knowledge," said Mr. Chanler, "that I am in favor of the enforcement of all laws, including the to determine whether personal bias and laws against gambling," and more than official narrowmindedness shall dominate enforcement of all laws, including the 2,000 people in the Academy of Music cheered frantically.

Mr. Chanler dropped his silken amiability as a man going into a rough and tumble fight throws aside the cloak which burdens him. He studiously avoided invective and he called no names, but his speech to the voters of Newburgh was decidedly more flavored with cayenne than any of his campaign utterances up to date, except the one of the afternoon on the front porch at Rokeby, the afternoon of his notification, when he swung in with Mr. Conners of Buffalo and Leader Murphy. There's no doubt as to the way his audience received the speech. They unloosed volleys of applause that must have been heard over at Fishkill. He said in part:

My opponent when he was on his way home from the West after several weeks of arduous work practically called all the people of the State who might vote against "crooks," I thought then that this was but the statement of a man who was bending under a heavy strain and whose temper had broken down, and I was charitably disposed not to make too much of such a blunder and to have it charged to temper,

Since then, however, he has given further evidence that this condition has become chronic with him and on Saturday last he wound up his speech by calling me a because I would not answer a question of his through which he was trying to introduce into the campaign an issue which has been finally disposed of and is not referred to in either of the party plat-I do not believe that this question was asked in good faith. He knows of his enforcement of all-laws, including the laws against gambling.

As was well said by a prominent Indebeen great Governors before Mr. Hughes and there will be great Governors after him." He has no monopoly of the virtue or the public spirit of this great State, and he has failed utterly to realize that this is a republic where all men are equal and not a kingdom where the people desire or will olerate a master who shall direct their private affairs, choose their amusements and limit their personal liberty.

His whole attitude through this contest has been, perhaps unconsciously, that of is superior not alone to his opponents but to his associates and sup-Why has he failed yet to indorse the platform upon which he was nominated his party associates on his ticket? I do not regard myself at liberty, as does the grand juries of their districts. I do not regard myself at liberty, as does my opponent, to invent personal issues of my own for the exploitation of any peculiar views which I may hold on various subjects. I trust I have none of the "holier than them," spirit, which pervades the prothan thou" spirit which pervades the professions of some of our adversaries. I espect the sincere convictions of an honest man, although I may differ from his conclusions, but I detest cant and hypocrisy wherever they are found, whether in high or low places, and I claim only to be the equal in integrity and fairmindedness of the average citizen.

Board of Supervisors of Dutchess county and as Lieutenant-Governor has not already proved to my fellow citizens that I will deal fearlessly, conscientiously and uprightly with every question of public morals thich may come before me as Governor, as well as every other question, then nothing which I could now say as a candidate would so prove. I stand upon my record.

I shall hope, as Governor, to recommend laws which, whether they may be widely advertised as reform measures or not, will result in the many and important reforms which may be needed in the conduct of the State government; laws which will not be unconstitutional upon their face and so de-clared almost upon enactment, but will be in consonance with the letter and spirit of of our great cosmopolitan State, and not merely flatter the prejudices and cater to the desires of a few particular classes.

Frepeat here what I said at Barrytown in to Hear Chanler, Who Couldn't Come.

MIDLLETOWN, N. Y., Oct. 19 .- Nearly in this city this afternoon to hear Lieut .-Gov. Chanler, who was scheduled to speak here. The crowd was disappointed, as Mr. Chanler did not show up. Speeches were made by Senator John C. R. Taylor, State Treasurer Hauser, Karl P. Hancel of New York, Francis E. Cullen of Oswego and Charles. A Evans. and Charles A. Evans. Senator Taylor was one of the two Democrats who sup-ported the anti-racetrack betting law. and in his speech he said that he voted to repeal the Percy-Gray law because he did not believe that it was constitutional, and furthermore that if reelected he would favor any measure for the good of the people whether it agreed or disagreed people whether it agreed or disagreed with the policies of the person occupying the office of Governor at the time. After the crowd had waited an hour for Lieut.-Gov. Chanler word was received that he would be unable to come to Middletown.

HE FIRES, HIS QUESTIONS AT CHANLER ONCE MORE.

Practically Accused Chanter of Trying to the Back Stairs-Speeches in Plattsburg, Ticonderoga and Glens Falls.

PLATTSBURG, Oct. 19 .- Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, the Democratic candidate for Governor, was practically accused by Gov. Hughes in his speeches in some of the northern counties to-day of trying to climb into the Executive Chamber at Albany by way of the back stairs. The Governor had reference to Mr. Chanler's refusal thus far to discuss the questions which the Governor has been putting

"The way to the Executive Chamber isn't up the back stairs, my friends," said the Governor to some of his audiences and the people who have heard him up in this country have apparently agreed with him, at least most of them. To-night before two big meetings held here in the Plattsburg Theatre and in the court house the Governor repeated the Chanler questions amid long and vociferous howls from the audience. They were big meetings for Plattsburg and they burned red fire enough to make the town smoke like one of the forest fires burning to the west of them. The Governor's tour to-day took him into the counties of Saratoga, Washing-Nearly 2,000 Men With a Band Turned Out ton, Warren, Essex and Clinton, which roll up big Republican pluralities, but counties in which this year there is talk 2,000 persons and a brass band turned out of a defection among some of the Repubdicans who don't quite like some of the Hughes policies.

> Mr. Chanler was up here last week. People have come to the Governor to-day and told him that Mr. Chanler disappointed a lot of those who felt friendly to him in not making a reply to Mr. Hughes's questions and not stating where he stood on the questions on which they were inclined to differ with the Gov-ernor. Particularly was this true at Saratoga and Glens Falls.

Saratoga and Glens Falls.

At the meetings here to-night, as well as those during the day in his trip into the north country, Mr. Hughes has been trying harder than ever to convince the office of Governor at the time. After the crowd had waited an hour for Lieut.-Gov. Chanler word was received that he would be unable to come to Middletown.

There was a cold wind blowing there and a cold group of folks at the station, a group that looked at the Governor's party sullenly and made no effort to get nearer. It was the enemy's country evidently, but Senator Brackett, who was aboard, said that outside of Saratoga the Governor was growing stronger. He said that in the county Mr. Hughes would run only 100 behind the 2,300 votes he got two years ago. Furthermore, Democrats of sporting proclivities were put out because Mr. Chanler in his speech at Saratoga had not come out and announced his attitude on the racing question, as they had exthe racing question, as they had ex-

They formed a iane leading from the opera house to the train and as the Governor went through it little arms worked hard went through it little arms worked hard to make the flags do their full duty. The Governor grabbed a score of little hands "Pass it along to the others," he said. "Pass it along to the others." he said. Then an old man came up and gave him a cane for himself and a bundle of hand carved paper cutters for his children. They were the work of a bedridden Republican.

A SHOCK FOR OLD GEN. APATHY. Buns Plump Into a Bunch of Democratic Enthusiasm in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19 .- General Apathy, stalking complacently through Chicago streets during weeks of campaigning, apparently expecting no interruption to mar the even tenor of his way, turned a corner to-night and ran plump into a hurricane of Democratic enthusiasm.

The visit of W. J. Bryan was less the cause than the occasion, for ward politicians in eight or nine wards used the opportunity to flaunt their own banners and advertise their own candidacies. From fifty automobiles, which made up the string escorting the Presidential candidate from the Union Station to Pilsen Garden Park, streamed more banners advertising the merits of city and county candidates than heralded the candidacy of Bryan or Stevenson. Mr. Bryan arrived this evening after a day of campaigning through Illinois from St. Louis to Chicago. He made several speeches, winding up to-night with two in Chicago. Mr. Bryan will leave in the morning for a trip through Between six and seven thousand men and women were inside and outside of the pavilion at Pilsen Garden when Bryan arrived there.

Mr. Bryan attacked President Roosevelt for "dragging the office of the President of the United States into a political campaign" and besought him to "keep his hands off and let me and Mr. Taft fight it out alone." He said in part:

"Since I began running for the Presidency I have been studying the problems of government and the fact that impresses me most strongly is their simplicity. Some people talk as though the problems of government are so difficult that just a few should be appointed to understand them and explain them to the rest. But I think these problems are simplicity itself. I think these problems are simplicity itself Jefferson said that the art of governmen was simply the art of being honest. Jef-ferson is right. Government is a simple question."

"Why should we have publicity of campaign expenses? Because the election of a President is everybody's business and so everybody ought to understand every part of that business. If these men you elect are to be your public servants ought to know whether they are plea to serve you or to serve some one else who has paid for their election." At the conclusion of his remarks at Pilsen Park, Mr. Bryan was whirled over to Arcade Hall, where he addressed another large audience.

Mr. Bryan began the day with an address in East St. Louis. At Granite City he made a short speech, ridiculing the claims of the Republican leaders, and at Alton strading on the spot where at Alton, standing on the spot where Lincoln and Douglas debated in 1858, he charged that the Republican party was preparing to purchase the election and dare not tell in advance how much money they are to have on hand on election day. day on William McCarthy, a bricklayer. The burglars entered the building through the coal hole. They found the engineer standing in front of his switchboard and bound him. While one of the pair went to the basement and got up sufficient steam to work the elevators the other unlocked the elevator door with the watchman's keys. He thrust the watchman inside and took his prisoner to the first floor. Depositing him safely near the elevator the two men quietly examined every floor for valuables, getting about $1,000.

When Nature gives her signal that something is wrong it is generally with the food; the old Dame is always faithful and one should act at once.

To put off the change is to risk that which may be irreparable. An Arizona

"A friend persuaded me to quit the old coffee and the starchy breakfast foods, and use Postum and Grape-Nuts instead. I shall never regret taking his advice. I began using them three months

"The change they have worked in me is wonderful. I now have no more of the distressing sensations in my stomach after eating, and I never have any headaches.
